INTRODUCTION.

IN presenting to the public this collection of photographs of "Men of Massachusetts," the Boston Press Club has departed somewhat from the system followed by publishers of similar works.

Its aim is to secure the photographs of those men only who have achieved prominence in their chosen professions or business.

"Merit" and not "money" is the passport to a place among those selected.

It will be noticed that there are no biographical sketches, no fulsome eulogies. The editors have exercised such care in the selection of names that it is hoped the gentlemen whose photographs are requested will appreciate the honor which has been done them in permitting them to be classified as the representative men in their respective professions or business. Their names are known to the public and it is the desire of the Boston Press Club that their faces may become as familiar as their names.
